Smile and Say Cheese

Rhonda Sawyer, who opened The Shoe Crate three years ago at 3110 S. Evans St., now is also operating Say Cheese, a photography studio that specializes in children's portraits. Sawyer said when the dental lab next door to the shoe store moved out, she decided she wanted to open a business that catered to children.

Former Shoe Crate manager Lindsay Plummer, who formerly taught gymnastics to children, handles the photography. She trained with a professional photographer for several weeks.

All 30-minute photo sessions are by appointment; no sitting fee is charged. Props are used for the candid shots. Proofs may be viewed the same day. All

What are you doing to reduce, reuse and recycle?

The March issue of Her magazine will focus on "going green." Tell us what you personally are doing to help protect the environment and we may use your ideas in the issue.

And each woman who shares their environmentally friendly tips will be entered in a drawing for this North Carolina-inspired "Kitty Tote" collectible handbag by Star 50. The oversized tan corduroy bag with blue trim, a tribute to the Wright Brothers' first flight at Kitty Hawk, has lots of pockets and makes a carry-on travel bag or shopping tote. The bag, available at www.star50bags.com, retails for $150.

To share your green ideas and be entered in the drawing for the purse, e-mail tellher@coxnc.com with your tip, name, age and town in which you live. Put "go green" in the subject line of the e-mail. Or send the information by mail to Go Green, Her magazine, P.O. Box 1967, Greenville, NC 27835.

Deadline is Jan. 15.
